Unfolding Spring Greetings

In my garden grows a rhubarb patch. At this time of year leaves are curled inward like tiny baby hands. Red stalks of tartness are only beginning to peek their way forward. Later this Spring those baby hands will unfold to gigantic leaves the size of elephant ears. And ample rhubarb sticks will climb a foot from the ground. Gonna be yummy.

I'm glad for Spring's arrival. For vaccines also unfolding their way into a restorative immunity. It's not just vegetables that are growing. Perhaps too, the human spirit, scarred but matured through recent experience.

I want to invite your participation to Fire & Water: A Leadership Journey and Rite of Passage. This will be our third 16-month cohort. I'm proud of this work. It is for youngers, elders, and those between. To grow wisdom. To grow soulfulness. To unfold.
